

Why do we encourage you to regularly service your car?

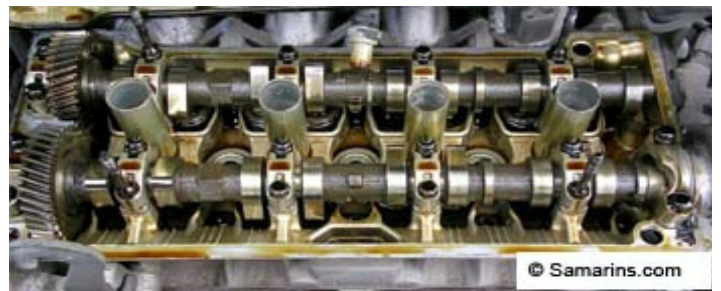

- ✓ Saves you money by preventing expensive reactive repairs
- ✓ Picks up early signs of possible major damage
- ✓ Reduces running costs
- ✓ Reduces the risk of component failure and break downs
- ✓ Helps your car to last longer and drive smoother
- ✓ Improves fuel economy
- ✓ Extends the life of your tyres

Irreversible damage is a possibility

When your car isn't regularly serviced, a number of major irreversible issues can develop, that you can't even see happening. To demonstrate this point, we'll show you a practical example of just one problem that can take place. Note, there can be many hundreds of problems that can take place!

An example in action: Oil Sludge

Oil Starvation is one cause of catastrophic engine failure. Compare these two images: the engine on the left hasn't been maintained well. It has relatively low mileage and already needs major, costly repairs. The engine on the right has been maintained well and after 281,000 km's is still in very good condition!

This is why regular servicing, using a good quality engine oil & oil filter is required. We recommend you service your vehicle: in accordance with your vehicle's manufactures specifications, every 6 months or 10 000 km's, or more frequently if it's being used under serve conditions.
