11 Questions You Must Ask Before Choosing a Painting Contractor!

Do they guarantee their work in writing? Verbal guarantees are useless. Do they have a track record and will they be around to honour any guarantee?

Do they employ qualified tradespeople? Qualified painter and decorators complete a 4 year apprenticeship to obtain their trade qualification.

Ask to see their Workers Compensation Insurance Certificate: Without this protection you are liable for any employee accident claim while they are working on your property.

Ask to see their QBSA licences: Licences help to keep out the unskilled "Cowboys" away from your home!

Ask to see Public Liability Insurance Cover: What if someone is severely injured on your property or your property is damaged? Most household insurances do not cover this type of claim. Once again you can be at risk.

What precautions will they take to protect your property? It is important that your property including furniture and flooring are fully protected during the work.

Do they supply you with a detailed written proposal? Unfortunately the value of a well written proposal is often only understood after a problem develops. It is only what is written down that counts. Lack of detail leaves you with no leg to stand on should a dispute arise.

Do they use sub contractors? This is very dangerous. This is one of the most common complaints we hear about. Often the job is auctioned off to the lowest bidder, who is not qualified or licensed.

Do they use Premium Paints? Only well known brands should be accepted with the solid backing of an established name. Also the paint systems should be followed using the correct preparation.

How long have they been in business? Most businesses fail within the first 5 years. Most businesses will only survive if they can deliver what the customer expects at a reasonable price.
