

Devil Bakehouse fires up Perth dining

DEVILISHLY GOOD: Local gourmets now have a bright new dining venue with a little touch of hell's kitchen, a lot of class, and some superb home-baked products: the Devil Bakehouse at 100 Main Road, Perth, was launched on 12 February.

Owners Kane and Kim Williams have relocated from Perth WA to Perth Tasmania and they bring with them a wealth of culinary and retail management experience. Kane has spent 25 years as a chef in fine-dining restaurants across Australia, including Sydney foodie-icon meccas such as Rockpool Bar & Grill, Cicada and Edna's Table.

"We had a wonderful food and discovery holiday to Tassie last year, with visions of buying a farm and doing the Gourmet Farmer thing. We fell in love with the place. We moved from Perth to Perth and so here we are and loving it," Kim said. "Everyone was just so friendly. We knew then that the possibilities we saw for the Devil Bakehouse in Perth were a perfect fit for us."

Devil Bakehouse serves up-market, fresh and funky food to travellers and locals with a friendly smile and attentive service. "We make great food like it used to be made but with a modern touch and a bit of devilish flair. So please be tempted," chef Kane told The Country Courier.

Devil Bakehouse serves up fine pastisseries, pies, artisan baked good and fresh meals for both locals and travellers to dine in or take away. A comfy lounge area adds to the appeal. There are gourmet heat-and-eat meals to take home and, coming soon, are a providore range and a catering service.
