This page aims to provide enough information about asbestos to help you make an informed decision. We've stuck to the basics, as asbestos is a complex subject. If you'd like more information, there are many websites that can provide more detail, or you can contact us.

What is asbestos?

Asbestos is a naturally occurring mineral that contains strong fibres that have excellent durability, fire resistance and insulating properties. Asbestos fibres are often invisible to the naked eye, can float in the air for a long time, and can be inhaled into the lungs. It is an extremely dangerous substance to inhale at any level. In the past, asbestos was mined and used to make many different materials. Materials containing asbestos were very common in the Australian residential building industry between the 1940s and late 1980s, before their production stopped.
