our history

In 1907, a dedicated group of Perth real estate agents gathered to form an industry association to represent them. This proved a challenging undertaking and it wasn't until 20 December 1918 that the association was established under the name 'Auctioneers', Land & Estate Agents' Association of Western Australia'.

These agents had a very clear directive; to position their members as professional and reputable business people within the Western Australian community.

In 1944, the association changed its name to the Real Estate Institute of Western Australia (Inc) and 'the Institute' as it's now known was born.

In the many years that have passed since 1918, REIWA has evolved into a respected and trusted authority on all things real estate in WA.

Today, REIWA represents over 1,100 member agencies and 90 per cent of operating agents in WA, delivering them with a range of services, advice and information to help market and manage their business.
