Parenting Agreements

The Family Law Act requires, except in exceptional circumstances, that parents attempt to resolve their differences using mediation before taking legal action.

Whether you have just recently separated or been apart for some years, we can help you work out a parenting agreement that is in the best interest of your child or children.

Our goal is to help you find a way to be the best parents you can be, even though you're no longer partners.

Property & Financial Matters

Mediation is an effective and affordable way to determine how you will divide your property and financial resources if your marriage or de facto relationship has broken down.

We use the four step process preferred by the Family Law Act to help you work out a fair and equitable division of your assets and liabilities. You can then take this agreement to your lawyer to prepare a final property settlement.

Our goal is to help you work out this calculation in a way that's straight forward, calm and respectful.

Workplace Disputes

Whether it is a disagreement amongst your own staff or between your staff and a client, mediation can be a way to quickly deal with misunderstandings and differences.

As an independent third party, we ensure the people involved discuss their issues in a way that is fair and balanced and we seek to restore trust and minimise the chance of future disputes.

Our goal is to help you grow your business by having healthy and positive working relationships.

Community & Neighbourhood Disputes

The Australian legal system now encourages people to take genuine steps to resolve their civil disputes themselves before commencing proceedings in the Courts.

Whether you are involved in a dispute with a neighbour or are challenging the quality of a service provided by a local business, we can help you resolve the issues quickly and fairly.

Our goal is to help you work through these differences respectfully and preserve goodwill in your local community.
