Asbestos Be Gone is a Brisbane based company that has been growing rapidly since it's humble beginnings. We now conduct asbestos removal works all over South East Queensland with a professional focus on WH&S compliance and good old fashioned customer service. We aim to eliminate the risk of asbestos disease in your home, commercial or industrial site. We also offer inspections and asbestos testing of Brisbane domestic, commercial and industrial sites, plus we also provide expert information for trades people, to safely assist with their day-to-day work in others' homes.

Asbestos Be Gone has quickly cemented itself as the number one asbestos inspection, removal and disposal team for the vast majority of Queensland. We conduct asbestos inspections on any property and will organise the safe asbestos removal and disposal of all waste. With our expert knowledge, we couple our work with education on asbestos. We are committed to not only minimising exposure to asbestos, but developing understanding about the risks of the material. At Asbestos Be Gone your safety is of paramount importance to us. All our work is carried out with the strictest of care and abides by stringent government requirements to help you avoid exposure to asbestos.

Amanda Jolly started Asbestos Be Gone with a simple philosophy, "protecting families from asbestos", and she has successfully built a company that brings safety and peace of mind to thousands of Australian families so that they do not suffer the same fate as many less fortunate souls over recent years. She gears her life towards protecting the safety of everyone involved, and that is her ultimate goal, to ensure everyone is safe from this "all too common" danger.

Amanda is a family oriented and motivated woman that only has your interests at heart. As a mother she joined the industry after researching the lack of education surrounding the hazards of asbestos in a great number of Australians homes and businesses. Amanda felt compelled to push for better education and knowledge sharing while providing a superior standard professional asbestos removalists to the industry. In short, this means you and your family are in safe hands with someone who really does care.

Asbestos Be Gone - About Asbestos

When inhaled, asbestos fibres can cause disease and illness, which can potentially be fatal. With your safety in mind, we have set up a great deal of easy to read information designed to educate and create awareness. We offer this information to every new customer with education at the core of our motivation. Developed for the general public and trades people alike, our centralised website resources are designed to deliver knowledge and service.

Whether your booking an inspection or simply just gathering information about current government regulations our focus is always aimed towards providing better service for "YOU". Minimise your risk of asbestos disease with Asbestos Be Gone. Using the latest techniques and technologies, we guarantee the most thorough housing inspections and caring asbestos removal in Australia.

What is asbestos?

White Asbestos (Chrysotile) – These asbestos fibres are curled and less sharp, however they can still lead to the onset of asbestos disease. Exposure to this type of asbestos typically occurs industrially from material like corrugated roof sheets.

Brown Asbestos (Amosite) – This African asbestos breaks into fibres that are similar to long, jagged needles. Brown asbestos is considerably dangerous if inhaled and is commonly found in thermal insulation products and ceiling tiles.

Blue Asbestos (Crocidolite) – Most common in Australia, this type of asbestos is considered the most dangerous. Found in a variety of locations, it's easily breakable and can deteriorate rapidly, releasing dangerous asbestos fibres into the air.
