

Consultant Mentor

Developing your future success

Wouldn't it be nice to have access to a wise and trusted counsellor or teacher? Someone who is a leader – an expert in their field. Someone who knows how to develop sustainable consulting and professional advisory businesses. A trustworthy person who is there when you need them – to provide the support you need and act as a role model. Wouldn't it be great if that person helped you gain the skills, knowledge and experience for you to prosper?

John Groarke is that person and I will help you:

- Better appreciate your own strengths and weaknesses
- Encourage you to establish goals and targets for further performance improvement
- Monitor and review progress in achieving your goals
- Identify issues that may adversely affect progress
- Identify opportunities that may favourably affect progress
- Generate an action plan for solving issues and realising opportunities
- Improve your understanding of your competitive environment
- Realise your full potential.

How it works

1. We agree on an end-game – what are you trying to achieve in your consulting or professional advisory business?
2. We meet on an irregular basis, for an hour or two, maybe more, when it suits you – but typically once a month in the early stages and then less frequently as time goes on, until we reach a point where the end-game is accomplished
3. At that time, you can set a new end-game, we can conclude the formal relationship, or we can continue with a quarterly, semi-annual or annual review – whatever suits you.
4. In all cases, I would like to maintain an informal and perpetual relationship.
