

Acrylic Splashbacks for Bathrooms, Showers, Laundries and Kitchens

Is your kitchen or bathroom looking a little dated or drab? An acrylic splashback can be an easy and relatively inexpensive way to inject some much-needed style and jazz up a tired space. Here we explore the acrylic splashback and latest trends in style and design.

What is an Acrylic Splashback?

Acrylic splashbacks look a lot like glass, which is part of their appeal as they tend to be more cost effective. They are often used to modernise a bathroom, laundry or shower. Installed in kitchens they look stunning with a heat proof insert behind the cook top. The acrylic is essentially a rigid plastic with an incredibly high transparency, so it won't develop a yellow tinge over time. Installed in long sheets or as a simple panel, an acrylic splashback is a relatively easy and inexpensive way to modernise your home and impress guests (and prospective buyers). The beauty of acrylic splashbacks is that they come in a rainbow of colours.

Ideal to go over existing tiles
