AS GOOD AS IF MUM MADE IT

Valencia Walford

WORKING good quality prepared meals to take home has been the busy business for Valencia Walford and her husband, Gordon, homepreneur Jason Khuriga.

The single mum, who also works full time, understands the struggle of trying to get a healthy homemade meal put on the table for her two boys, Charles, 4, and Andrew, 6.

Leveraging her family connections in the restaurant industry, she and her friend Rebecca Marr have created a home-based business providing convenient-quality homemade Middle Eastern and Mediterranean meals for busy families.

Their business is called Just Like Mumma.

"I think the name of the business sums up exactly what we have to offer," Ms Khuriga said.

"They are genuine, prepared meals, cooked in the loving way your grandma would have made them."

"Having this team has well offset the same quality, fresh food you would have from a store, homemade meal for your family."

Mrs Marr, who has been a mum for the first time, said she is aware her time-poor she will be using her friends, neighbours and family. But these meals will only require half the preparation time compared to making a meal from scratch.

"All the food is made by chefs and to restaurant quality," she said.

The business started a month ago, and Ms Khuriga said already orders exceeded expectations.

"I can take away a little night evening and cooking experts to find the right products, but I can't help with what we have to offer," she said.

The pair see the key to a good business partnership is trust and honesty and the ability to delegate work between each other.

They aim to have covering packages on offer by the end of the year.
